Abstract

The objective of this work is to discuss music as a teaching methodology for the migrations of northeastern peoples in the 20th century, based on the work of the Ceará artist Belchior. For this, it was necessary to read the literature on: a) music as a teaching resource; b) migration of the Northeastern population, especially musical artists; c) the music of Northeastern artists as a cultural expression. An analysis was also made of the proposals for the debate on migrations in the classroom according to the Base Nacional Comum Curricular (BNCC). It was evidenced that despite several stereotypes that the Northeast region carries, the music of local artists can serve as a form of instrument that portrays the true singularities of the place.

Keywords: Song; northeast migrations; teaching of human sciences.

Resumen

El trabajo aquí presentado tiene como objetivo discutir el canto como metodología para la enseñanza de las migraciones de los pueblos nordestinos en el siglo XX a partir de la obra del artista cearense Belchior. Para ello, fue necesario leer la literatura sobre: a) la canción como recurso didáctico; b) migración de la población nororiental, especialmente de artistas musicales; c) una canción de artistas nordestinos como expresión cultural. También se hizo un análisis de las propuestas para el debate sobre las migraciones en el aula según la Base Nacional Común Curricular (BNCC). Evidentemente, a pesar de los muchos estereotipos que carga la región Nordeste, una canción de artistas locales puede servir como una forma de instrumento que retrata las verdaderas singularidades del lugar.

Palabras clave: Canción; migraciones del noreste; enseñanza de las ciencias humanas.
